

Every family has a story to tell

Eva and Matt have been foster parents since November 2016. Soon after becoming licensed, they accepted placement of two girls; a newborn and a four-year-old. Although newer foster parents, they have jumped right in and prove to be dedicated to the wellbeing of these children and have fallen in love with them as if they were their own. Eva and Matt are committed to having a healthy relationship with the biological parents and have become a positive support for the mom. Eva sends weekly updates to the caseworker and therapist just to touch base and keeps everyone updated with the most recent news. She communicates often with the biological mother, even inviting her to church on special occasions.

Embracing the change

Eva has stood by the girls since they came into care and always advocates for their best interest. The family has adjusted to the many changes that come with fostering. They are slowly learning to work as one unit, and the progress made since the girls came into care is amazing. The family enjoys weekend walks, bike rides and other fun activities. The family's licensing worker describes Eva as, "One of the kindest, patient and understanding foster parents I have worked with. If there is a misunderstanding or she needs clarification, she does not hesitate to ask for help."
